[the-village-birders] Carnie Island birdwalk

It was cool, dark, windy, and the birds were hiding, but 6 brave soles met for birding at Carney Island this morning. Weir Lake had white caps so we went to Little Weir Lake and scoped the lake. There were Forster's terns, Ruddy ducks and a few others flying. From Little Weir we headed down the Boy Scout Trail, and, according to my Ebird, we covered 8.67 miles before we were done. It was a great day for a walk. We counted 26 Species including a rare Yellow Billed CucKoo. It was on the trail and luckily I happened to be looking down or I would have missed it. It hung around and we all got a look from about 6 feet away. What a treat. The light was bad but I managed to get a couple of Pictures. See attached.
